Fund Review

Global shares advanced in July. In contrast to much of the year so far, emerging markets outperformed developed market equities. Gains were supported by lower inflation in several developed markets, including the US.

US equities advanced in July, with economic data indicating resilient growth and inflation starting to fall. The Federal Reserve (Fed) enacted a rate hike of a quarter percentage point in July. The central bank offered no firm position on whether rates would rise further in September, although expectations are that this will be the final hike of this cycle.

Eurozone shares made gains in July, supported by a fall in inflation and positive economic growth data. Top gaining sectors included real estate, energy and materials. Laggards were consumer staples, information technology and utilities.

Emerging market (EM) equities rallied in July, outperforming developed market equities as Chinese authorities indicated economic support for the real estate sector and consumption. They also pledged to alleviate local government debt burdens. Stronger commodity prices were beneficial for some EM too.

With recession pushed out, the likelihood of a soft landing scenario is becoming more likely than previously. We maintained a diversified style exposure as we closely monitor inflation and central bank policies.
